Born in 1964, my first job was raising rabbits and chickens to sell. During the Easter and Christmas holidays, I worked as a janitor helping my grandfather run the kitchen at our church. After the events, we would clean the halls and organizer everything back to normal. Another related side job was collecting aluminum cans for the church. Although I could have kept the proceeds, the church made good use of the funds. After years of taking on many odd jobs, I finally landed at what would become my second home, McDonald's. The first day I joined was my junior year in high school. We were a family there. I continued working through most of my college years and after graduating from college, I earned the opportunity to work for a large engineering firm. I stayed there for over 25 years. In 2009, after years of dreaming, I was able to afford to buy my own McDonald's.

Fishing in New Hampshire was not just an ordinary trip today. Zach Fahey was out with his dad and another angler hoping to catch a few striped bass and caught something more grand. They managed to capture footage on video of a humpback whale breaching the surface. "I'm surprised I kept the camera still," the 28-year-old Massachusetts man told the New Hampshire Union Leader. "It kind of scared the crap out of me at first," Fahey told The Boston Globe. "Once I realized what I was looking at, it was really cool." The whale's head was nearly the size of his entire boat from the video. Seeing the video makes me want to go out fishing to see what I might find.

An owner of a company gave his worker his own car today, on his first day of work at that. I know it was somewhat of a publicity stunt on his part but I like it anyway. Here’s what happened. A guy named Walter Carr had to be at work but his car broke down. So instead of making up an excuse, he left walking in the middle of the night. The place of business in Birmingham Alabama was 20 miles from his house and he didn't want to be late. A police officer saw him walking in the middle of the night and asked him where he was going. Impressed by his grit, the officer invited him to breakfast. A few days later, the owner of the company heard about what his new worker did and drove from Tennessee to meet him. When they saw each other face to face, the owner gave Walter the keys to his own 2014 Ford Escape. Totally awesome story. I want to go and buy something from that business owner. I’m going to start walking in the morning to see what I can get to drive, lol.

Sports-Golf

Sunday, August 12, 2018.

Brooks Koepka beasts his way to his second major of the season. "It's really incredible," he said considering how early in the year he thought he wasn't going to play at all with a season ending injury. He won the U.S. Open at Shinnecock Hills to setup what he did today. This is his third career major in the last year and a half including the U.S. Open win at Erin Hills. Koepka now has three times the number of major wins as his gym pal, Dustin Johnson. With this PGA Championship win, he is making his own case to be considered the best golfer in the world. Forget about official rankings for a minute. He beat everyone including a charging Tiger. I've set some goals for myself in life and one of them is to become a great golfer. I bet Koepka is shaking in his boots. I'M COMING FOR YOU IN 15 YEARS BROOKS and me being a girl still won't save you. Evelyn

Sports-Dodgeball

Monday, August 13th, 2018.

Dodgeball is no longer just a game for school gym's. It's also a competitive sport now. This past weekend at the Dodgeball World Cup, players we're dipping, diving & ducking all over the court. One of the players from Canada had said that it was exciting and great seeing people's reaction knowing that Dodgeball was an official competitive sport. All this was on display at the World Dodgeball Association's second tournament.

There were 13 different countries competing in men's, woman's and mixed competition. 10 teams each contested for the ultimate title. Dodgeball has grown ever since 2013. There were 35 countries competing all from different continental federations back then. In the present it has grown to over 62 countries. That is extremely satisfying. Can you believe on how much people are actually enjoying this competitive sport? It really is great hearing that there is almost 67 million participants worldwide. That statement shocked me when I learned of it. I think I might even join next year. Evelyn

Business-Tech

Monday, Sept. 10th, 2018.

Teenagers admit that all of this new technology has been a distraction to what is going on around them. The strength of their relationships with humans have decreased and in many cases caused fluctuation in their grades. Most of the fluctuation is trending towards a downward spiral. Yet, a striking amount of students (30%) in their teens (ranging from 13 to 17) have also said they wish their parents would get off their devices too. Also, an overwhelming amount of students (72%) believe tech companies manipulate each phone to entice them into spending more time learning their nuances. Every phone manufacturer blatantly shows the different features they have added available for download which puts the users data storage in many cases into crisis mode. Along with all of these new apps comes the competition to be the most popular. Snapchat and Instagram are on the top of that list with an estimated 81% of teenagers using them. These two apps almost create withdrawal symptoms when they're not being used. The biggest downfall in technology of course is the mass amount of teens being bullied (13%). In my opinion, social media rules need to get updated just like the technology driving it. About every decade or so something new comes along causing us all to need an update. Yes, including myself.

Lifestyle-Adoption

In the United States, foster care started as a result of the efforts of Charles Loring Brace. "In the mid 19th Century, some 30,000 homeless children lived on the New York City streets." Brace took these children off the streets and placed them with families all over the country. He did this to save them from a lifetime of suffering. He sent these children to families by train, which gave the name, "The Orphan Train Movement." Could you please help us continue his good works by starting the adoption process today.

Bob, 18 years old:

It's all about enjoying a challenge and stretching oneself to the limits. It is absolutely essential that you develop mental toughness. Mentally tough people can think negatively without becoming discouraged. The issue is not failure but your reaction to it. Enjoy your work, your work is important. Go out with a plan and stick to it. If you miss, accept it. Your next opportunity is more important than your last mistake. Stop reacting to your failures and start developing the right mental attitude, "I Am A Winner!"
